FDR Calls for Freezing of Wages and Salaries In Seven-Point Inflation Curb

SETS PROGRAM GEARING U.S. TO WAR LIFE

Tells Congress He Wants Heavy Taxes, Curb on Profits and Prices to Farmers.

URGES MORE RATIONING

Calls For Bigger Voluntary Bond Buying; Top Salary Limit of $25,000.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Plainly calling for "spartan living" for the duration, President Roosevelt today laid a seven-point anti-inflation program before congress embracing increased taxes, voluntary savings, price ceilings, the rationing of all essential commodities where shortages exist, and a prohibition against any net incomes in excess of $25,000 a year.

In a special message to congress on the "cost of living" for a nation at war, Mr. Roosevelt proposed:

1. "Heavy taxation to keep personal and corporate profits at a reasonable rate, the word 'reasonable' being defined at a low level."

2. "Fix ceilings on the prices which consumers, retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers for the things they buy; and manufacturers pay for the things they buy; and ceilings on rents for dwellings in all areas affected by war industries.

3. "Stabilize the remuneration received by individuals for their work.

4. "Stabilize the prices received by growers for the products of their lands.

5. "Encourage all citizens to contribute to the cost of winning this war by purchasing war bonds with their earnings instead of using those earnings to buy articles which are not essential.

6. "Ration all essential commodities of which there is a scarcity, so that they may be distributed fairly among consumers and not merely in accordance with financial ability to pay high prices for them.

7. "Discourage credit and instalment buying, and encourage the paying off of debts, mortgages, and other obligations; for this promotes savings, retards excessive buying and adds to the amount available to the credits for the purchase of war bonds.

On the subject of large salaries, the president said:

". . . No American citizen

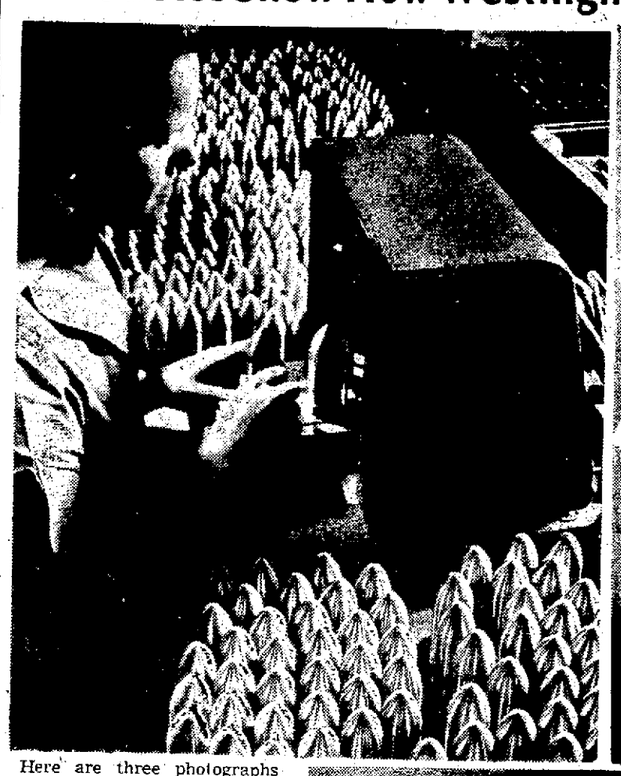
Photos Show How Westinghouse Enters War Production



Here are three photographs which dramatize the conversion of the Mansfield Westinghouse plant from peace-time manufacture to production of war orders, which reached a major point today when the company's refrigerator assembly line was closed "for the duration." In upper left photograph, Helen Kitzmiller is shown at work as an inspector of the 37 millimeter shells which the plant is producing. At upper right, Sarah Emery is using a tiny vacuum instrument, which cleans dust from a binocular lens in the same manner that a household vacuum cleaner cleans the parlor rug. In lower picture, workers and plant executives autograph the last refrigerator to come from the company's assembly line. It was presented at a ceremony today to the Red Cross, for use as a bloodbank to store blood plasma.

MENACE 4 WITH GUNS, GET $400

2 Armed Men Rob Loudonville Restaurant Operator, Wife and Two Customers.

Ashland county authorities and state highway patrolmen were searching today for two swarthy, middle-aged men who held up a Loudonville restaurant proprietor, his wife and two customers at the point of a gun shortly after midnight and escaped with more than $300.

Lewis Stone, proprietor of the Bank restaurant on Main street in Loudonville, told Dale Hammond, Ashland county sheriff, that one of the robbers walked into the restaurant at 12:30 a. m., accosted himself, Mrs. Stone and two customers, John Shipp and James Clark.

The robber pulled out a .32 caliber gun, according to Stone, and said:

"This is a stick-up. One crooked move and I'll let you have it."

While the man with the gun menaced the Stones and their customers, the other entered and emptied the cash register.

Stone said that the man holding the gun then said:

"Get out your wallets and empty them on the counter."

The gunman kept his weapon trained on them while his help-

Turns Out Last Refrigerator As War Production Creeps Up

By ALVIN L. KRIEG

The war's effect upon peace-time production of consumer goods items reached the full force of its impact upon Mansfield today when Westinghouse brought 12 years of refrigerator production to an end for the duration by closing down its refrigerator assembly line.

That final refrigerator, its glistening white enamel sides inscribed with the baked-in signatures of more than 100 plant executives and workers, was presented today to the American Red Cross for installation as a blood bank.

Refrigerators for years have been No. 1 item at the Westinghouse plant in Mansfield. Other electrical appliances are still being produced at the plant, but they too, are on the way out.

Suspension of refrigerator manufacture was no surprise. It had been coming for months. But it was significant in that it brought into sharp focus the transition that is now going on, and has been going on for months—the conversion from manufacture of the luxury goods of peace to production of shells and binoculars and other war orders.

That conversion is a long and laborious process, and Westinghouse officials have been hard at it for many months. Employment has been tapering off as the plant drew closer to the day when all production of appliances would stop. And it will continue to taper off, during May and June, before production of war orders goes into high gear and furloughed workers can be called back to work on those orders, officials pointed out.

Plant executives hope that employment by next fall will be close to the all-time high figure of last August, when the plant had more than 5,000 on its payroll. That figure has been dropping off steadily since that time.

In September of 1941, approximately 1,300 workers were furloughed. And in the last two

5,000 Enroll in Richland's Manpower Poll in 2 Days; Stations Still Busy.

Some 8,000 Richland county men whose memories go back to San Juan Hill and Chateau Thierry will be enrolled by 9 p. m. today in Uncle Sam's industrial army, holding the home front in democracy's battle against tyranny.

That hour will mark the close of the nation's fourth manpower registration for World War No. 2. It will soon provide a complete inventory of every manual and mental resource available for producing planes, tanks, guns, ships and bullets to beat the Axis.

Incidentally, it will set a new precedent in American history for never before has the country been called upon even to list men from 45 to 64 inclusive for potential service in defense of the nation's liberty.

SALE OF SUGAR STOPS TONIGHT, NEW CURBS DUE

Government Gets Ready For Registration Days; More Items to Be Rationed.

COFFEE AND TEA SOON

Even Hairpins and Bobby Pins Are Hit By Order, Curbing Output 50 Per Cent.

The public's sweet tooth goes on short rations, for the first time in more than a quarter of a century, when retail sales of sugar in Mansfield and the rest of the nation is halted by order of the War Production Board at midnight tonight.

And that's not all. Word came from Washington today that government officials are making plans to ration coffee and possibly tea soon. In addition, orders are being drawn up to freeze rents in more than 30 American cities.

Furthermore, it was disclosed the Office of Price Administration is considering a plan to ration gasoline to more than 10,000,000 eastern motorists on a basis of "necessary mileage." Under this plan, the number of miles a motorist MUST drive would be the basis for determining the amount of gasoline he would get.

Another WPB order struck directly at milady, and it hit her right where she'll mind it plenty—on the top of the head. This order cut production of hairpins and bobby pins in half during the 90-day period beginning April 25.

Also, beginning May 6, no manufacturer may produce a metal hairpin or bobby pin longer than two inches. The gauge steel that may be used in hair fasteners was limited to .035 inches or less.

There is no shortage of coffee, officials explained, but the problem of shipping the product is becoming acute, as in the case of gasoline. It was learned that the present tea supply will last only three months. There has been no decision yet as to whether to ration tea, or let the stocks run ouf on a first-come, first-served basis. Coffee rationing plans were being drawn up to meet any emergency.

Sources in Washington declare that the average American will soon begin to feel the effects of the war by more and more rationing. Late in the fall, because of lend-lease shipments to friendly nations, clothing and such food products as butter, cheese, lard, bacon, and eggs probably will be

HOPE FOR RAIN

Farmers Survey Baked Earth as Mercury Hits 87.

Richland county farmers hoped for rain today after a spring "heat wave" pushed the mercury up to 87 degrees Sunday to equal the April record in Mansfield.

Only twice in the past 17 years has the mercury reached Sunday's mark, once on the 24th of the month in 1925 and again on the 11th in 1930.

Farmers said rain is needed badly to help the oats crop and to put the earth in condition for corn planting. No rain has fallen in more than a week and during most of that time the temperature was above normal.

The weatherman forecast scattered showers for this afternoon and tonight and indicated that the warm weather may stay at least another day. The mercury registered 76 at noon today.

Red Army Reports Victory In Far North As British Airmen Keep Up Telling Aerial Attack On Centers Of Nazi Power On Continent.

(By Associated Press)

While the RAF cracked the whip over western Europe there were signs today on the eastern front that Russia had launched upon an offensive to knock Finland out of the war and outflank the Germans on their main northern anchors about Leningrad and southward.

Nearly 2,000 Finnish soldiers were reported killed last week in this apparent offensive likened in hitting power to the coup de grace dealt the Finns by the Red army two years ago to end their short winter war.

The battle lines in the far north were drawn up well inside the Finnish frontier of 1939 and the Soviet troops were reported demonstrating all along the battlefront that they held the initiative firmly.

The Russians were pressing home telling blows against the disheartened Finns in an effort to knock them out of the war and protect the Arctic ports of Murmansk and Archangel.

Leningrad reports of successful defense against raiding Axis planes indicated the Germans were using every available aircraft in an effort to cripple the Red army while the Nazis prepared for an offensive.

Meanwhile, the unending RAF attacks threatened devastation of centers of German power, one by one, in the deliberate manner of the last four nights of consecutive bombing at Rostock, a process which no doubt would be speeded up when and if Germany gets under way against Russia.

It was estimated that 1,600,000 pounds of bombs had been dumped on Rostock.

Last night's RAF pounding at Rostock, Baltic port of exit for supplies and troops to the northern Russian front as well as a great plane-building center, was followed up by another daylight sweep over the northern part of captive France.

Before noon, great bomber-fighter formations of the RAF had winged across the English channel and back from the direction of Boulogne.

Airdromes at Mardyck, near Calais, and Le Touquet, once a famous French beach resort near Boulogne, were bombed and strafed at low level. One of the returning fighter pilots reported sighting four German anti-aircraft ships on the homeward trip. He left two of them afire.

The German high command reported a reprisal raid last night, in which the English report town

ANXIETY: New Hitler Move Hints Trouble In Germany

BULLETIN

SAN FRANCISCO—(U.P.)—The Khabarovsk radio, in eastern Siberia, today reported widespread sabotage and revolt among the people of Trandheim, Norway, and strong measures by the German Gestapo to cope with the situation.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Adolf Hitler made himself the supreme master of Germany yesterday with fiat power even above his own Nazi law, and his act roused the hopeful suspicion of his enemies that Germany is in deep internal trouble after a winter of near-catastrophe.

The extraordinary power to require absolute obedience from every German was voted by the reichstag at Hitler's demand after he addressed its uniformed members in a speech strangely mixing his usual bombast and confident predictions of victory with a new undercurrent of anxiety.

One of those predictions was that Soviet Russia would be the decisive battleground of the world conflict and that it would be a scene of Nazi triumph.

But Hitler's demand came immediately after he had conceded to the reichstag that the German army survived a "threatening catastrophe" and suffered hardships for which the reich had been unprepared during the terrible cold of the Russian winter.

That the fuehrer, who became Germany's military as well as civil overlord during the winter crisis on the Soviet front, should now demand strengthening of his dictatorial power was hailed both in Britain and Russia as a sign that Nazidom's home front was cracking.

The London Daily Herald declared it would not be surprised if Hitler planned a purge "or CHUNGKING, China—(U.P.)—Chinese forces under Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell recaptured the entire Taunggyi-Hopong sector of the eastern Burma front and American Volunteer pilots shot down five Japanese planes, a special communique said today.

(By Associated Press)

Straining for conquest of Burma ahead of the wet monsoons coming in mid-May and jockeying with a fresh show of air power for southwest Pacific positions before the United Nations can strike back full force, Japan has a big job on her hands and little time in which to do it.

Premier General Hideki Tojo himself acknowledged today that "the war still has to be fought" despite Japan's victories so far.

"The war's coming stage will be a real test for the Japanese nation," he said in an address covered by the Tokyo radio. "* * * Even we, who are behind the line, must be of the same mind as the troops at the front and be fully prepared to cope with any attack on Japan itself * * *"

Wide-ranging Allied bombers answered the sudden intensification of enemy air activity in the Australian theater yesterday by blasting again at Japanese bases at Lae, New Guinea, and Bougainville, in the Solomon islands. A Sunday attack by the Japanese on Port Moresby, New Guinea, was reported beaten off.

At least four planes were destroyed by the Allies at Lae.

Military sources at Allied headquarters in Australia voiced belief that the continuing American-Australian offensive in the air, harbinger of all-out action being prepared to crack the backbone of Japanese bases facing Australia, might force a speedy showdown.

The Japanese can ill afford to

AT AN ADVANCED AMERICAN FLYING BASE, Australia —(U.P.)— (Delayed) —The communique said:

"Our air force attacked shipping, barracks and warehouses and machine gunned personnel at Rabaul. Incendiary bombs were dropped on wharf establishments."

I was there, cramped in a big American bomber which took part in the raid.

I saw high explosive and incendiary bombs crash among shops, barracks and warehouses. My heart stopped as we swept down to 75 feet with our machine guns blazing at Japanese troops whose drab uniforms I could see plainly. I heard the sweating gunners curse and sing as they fought off attacks by our enemy navy-O planes, and I joined, in the sudden wild, reasonless laughter of all aboard as we headed for home, safe.

As I write I have just completed 22 flying hours, in which we made two reconnaissance and one bombing flight, with an American bombing squadron.

For three days I lived with the crews in the dense jungle. Thursday was the big day. Before daybreak silent, shadowy figures were moving about in the chilled air of the clearing.

THE WAR TODAY

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
(Wide World War Analyst)

As the time draws near for the joining of the crucial battle of the Hitlerian conflict, there emerges the possibility that this Armageddon may see uprisings in many places by the invisible army of the subjugated peoples.

Should this happen on an extended scale—and it might—it likely would produce bloody chaos in the affected areas. The fury of a revolting populace, even though lacking proper arms, can be very terrible.

Word long ago was spread throughout the conquered countries by Allied radio and by underground telegraph that the hour of deliverance would come, and the V-for-Victory symbol became a flaming torch of hope.

Indeed, the campaign inspired so much premature violence that the British began urging these Hitler-ridden folk to hold their peace until the signal came for an uprising. It has been hard to keep them in hand. The yoke of bondage has been cruel.

But now suddenly Britain's "Colonel Brittons" — the radio voice which has been fostering and guiding the V-for-Victory army on the continent—has electrified his hearers by calling on them to prepare for united action. Probably within six weeks, says the spectral "colonel."

Already France, Belgium, Norway, Holland and the countries of eastern Europe have given us many grisly examples of what the invisible army can accomplish. Mysterious hands have been reaching out of the darkness of the night to snatch the lives of German soldiers. Troop trains have been wrecked, and bombs have been thrown.

In short, there have been constant sabotage and killings despite the warnings from "Colonel Britton" to go slowly and not arouse Nazi ire until the time is ripe.

Fear that unrest might even boil up in his own country was indicated in Hitler's reichstag speech yesterday. His demand for obedience from the people carried a note of grave concern to the ears of expert radio observers in London.

Just when the all-out Allied-Axis clash will come is still a matter of conjecture. Probably "Colonel Britton's" guess that the volcano will erupt in six weeks or less is a fair one. Of course, whatever else happens, the titanic Russo-German battle will increase in its bloody intensity as the ground dries and becomes suitable for a war of movement.

Hitler said yesterday that "it will be in eastern Europe that this war will be decided"—and few would dispute that observation.

MOTORMAN HELD IN JERSEY CITY SUBWAY CRASH

Five Killed, 263 Injured When Train Jumps Tracks at Station.

(By United Press)

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—The motorman of the subway train which jumped the tracks while entering a station at high speed last night, killing five persons and injuring 263, was arrested today and charged with manslaughter.

Most of the injured had been trampled and kicked in the panic which is the almost inevitable aftermath of subway accidents. The lights went out, electrical connections having been short circuited, sent out clouds of acrid smoke, and in an instant men and women locked in the cars were screaming and shouting and ramming their hands and feet through the windows, seeking escape from the car and from the smoke-filled tunnel to the air of the street above.

The charge against Motorman Louis Austin Vierbucken, 48, appeared a formality. Authorities said there was no evidence of negligence. He was questioned for hours while workmen cleared the debris blocking the main line of the Hudson and Manhattan Railway company, which runs through a tube under the Hudson river, from Manhattan borough, New York City, to Hoboken, Jersey City, and Newark, N. J., and is part of the rapid transit system serving the greater New York area.

The six-car train was bound from Newark to Manhattan. Approaching the Exchange Place station here, Motorman Vierbucken increased his speed to carry the train over switch points and circuit breakers. The fourth car left the tracks, climbed the three-foot platform, sheering off its wheels and coming to a stop upright.

Two persons were killed outright—Mrs. Anna Stephen, 36, of New York and Morris Huttler, 36, Newark and Providence, R. I. The other two—Rube Greenberg, 30, New York, Christensen Timpe, 52, Jersey City and an unidentified negro—died several hours later of their injuries.

All the injured were taken to Jersey City medical center where 163 were treated for minor cuts and bruises and sent home. One hundred persons, more seriously hurt, remained in the hospital.

AXIS SUBS GET ANOTHER SHIP

Freighter Sent to Bottom, Crew Reaches U. S. Port Safely.

(By International News Service)

PORTLAND, Me.—All 35 crew members of a medium-sized United Nations freighter were safe in port today after fire in her smoke stack made the ship an easy target for an Axis submarine.

The survivors told the story of the shelling and torpedoing which sent their vessel to the bottom of the Atlantic ocean following their arrival here. In all, the submarine fired 35 shells from its deck gun and one torpedo at the stricken ship.

Capt. Anton Anderson, 60, of Baltimore, said the attack occurred in the North Atlantic at 10:45 p. m. The submarine surfaced after launching one torpedo and began shelling the ship before lifeboats could be lowered. However, the crew escaped with no injuries.

A NORTH ATLANTIC PORT—(INS)—Survivors of a United Nations freighter, torpedoed en route from the Russian port of Murmansk were recovering today from terrible experiences endured when their vessel sank so rapidly the lifboats were swamped.

Twenty of the crew of 45 drowned in the icy sea before an escort vessel picked up the others who were able to keep afloat for 20 minutes in the paralyzing-cold water.

The ship's captain, a Norwegian, said the vessel was bombed almost continuously during one day, and some bombs fell within 20 yards.

BACK AT WORK

Mt. Gilead Workers Report at Hydraulic After 'Holiday.'

The 380 employes of the Hydraulic Press Manufacturing company at Mt. Gilead went back to work today after declaring a "work holiday" Friday morning because of a stalemate in union contract negotiations.

Walter McElroy, president of the local branch of the International Association of Machinists (AFL), said the men went back to their jobs to avoid impeding the war effort and not in behalf of the company.

U. S. Labor Conciliator John Addicks was expected to continue efforts to reach an agreement between the union and the management. The union's chief demands were reported to be a 50-cent minimum hourly wage and a closed shop as well as a general wage increase. The present wage scale is said to range from 49 to 90 cents per hour.

The company does not operate on Saturdays or Sundays, hence the "holiday" was in effect one day, Friday.

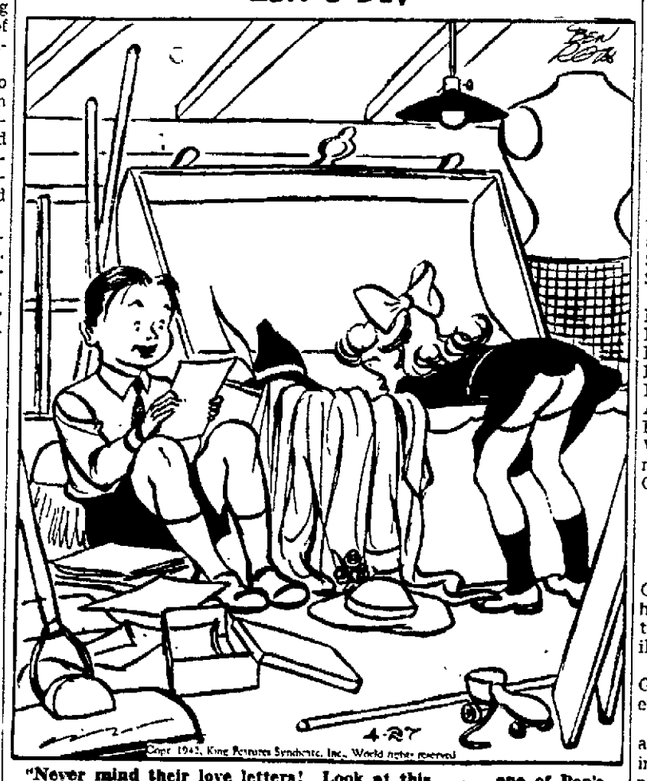
Laff-a-Day



"Never mind their love letters! Look at this . . . one of Pop's old report cards!"

There was a time when collectors of popular dance records could pick up many favorites for their prize collections at Mansfield juke box distributors but that day has passed. Now with the government restriction on record-manufacturing, such records are "scarcer than hens' teeth." It seems that the shellac used to coat the records is a very important article in the country's war program, and distributors purchasing new records must, from now on, turn in their old ones.

A colored parolee of the Mansfield reformatory received $3 this morning for a trip to courthouse. Although his name was drawn as a prospective petit juror, the parolee was not eligible to serve on the jury because he has not been restored to citizenship. Prosecutor Harold Lutz said the man could collect his fee as a juror. The prosecutor said the parolee's name was placed in the jury wheel before he was sentenced and apparently had not been withdrawn.

Residents on Green street have decided that their addresses are too hard to find and intend to do something about it. At present, the street runs from Glessner avenue to Mendota street but the section between Ohio and Mendota streets has not been developed. To correct this, Green street home owners are submitting to city council two petitions, one to have Green street vacated from Ohio to Mendota street and another to change the name of the remainder of Green street from Glessner to Ohio street to Ohio street. This would result in one long street running from Glessner avenue to Poplar street which the residents believe could be found more easily.

Then, with Hawkins doing the questioning, and Bromfield giving the answers, they completed the registration.

SEEKS PUBLIC AID TO CRUSH ENEMY AGENTS

Fleet Officer Asserts Axis Subs Get Information From Spies in U. S.

(By International News Service)

WITH THE ATLANTIC FLEET—Enemy agents, operating today along America's shoreline, are a serious threat to Allied shipping, according to a flag officer of the fleet.

Operation of Axis submarines, the officer believes, has been based upon information obtained from spies in many instances.

Advocating immediate action to smash the spy menace, he asserted:

"If the people of the United States knew the damage to our war effort that these hounds of hell can produce, they would pretty soon put an end to it—or I don't know the spirit of America."

Fully engaged in the battle of the Atlantic, the flag officer sounded a plea for cooperation of the civilian population in combating enemy agents and recommending heavy punishment of the apprehended spies.

"If we drew a ring of steel around our coast line and borders," he said, "news of military nature could not get out of the country.

"Consequently, our ship movements would not be known," he continued. "The enemy's submarines would get no 'tip-offs' and he would have to work in the dark.

"This fight is not only for the military to carry on. We feel that the people ashore have just as much interest in winning this war as we have, and to do so, they must back us up to the limit in word and deed.

"We have gone at suppression of this spy business in a most tolerant and tender fashion, so it seems, because of the proper desire to avoid 'witch-hunting' and the alienation of those or foreign birth among us who are just as proud of this country and as patriotic as you or I.

"The sneaking spy is a hard fellow to get at. The intelligence services and the FBI are no doubt working tooth and nail to uncover spies, but the territory to be covered is so great that they can not stamp out the spy evil without full hearted cooperation of every loyal American citizen.

Corregidor Swing Band 'Jams It' Between Raids

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Orville C. Harris, young musician from New Boston, O., is "swinging it" these days amid war's grim reality in embattled Corregidor fortress.

Harris and other musicians in the nation's service, all of whom have played with bands and broadcast in the United States, join in jam sessions between air raids, the war department reported today.

The department cited a claim of Corregidor's defenders that the group is "one of the best "pick-up" bands west of the International Date Line and east of the China sea."

Corregidor's band which plays "when the air is not filled with reverberations of enemy bombs and shells to strike a discordant note to melodious music, draws members from Texas, Ohio, Wisconsin, Arizona and California.

FDR PROPOSES PAY CURB FOR WAR DURATION

Gives Congress Seven-Point Program For Warding Off Inflation.

ought to have a net income, after he has paid his taxes, of more than $25,000 a year.

"It is indefensible that those who enjoy large incomes from state and local securities should be immune from taxation while we are at war. Interest on such securities should be subject at least to surtaxes.

"I earnestly hope that the congress will pass a new tax bill at the earliest moment possible. Such action is imperative in the comprehensive all-out effort to keep the cost of living down—and time is of the essence."

The president, however, declared his opposition to any change in the 40-hour week law and demanded that American labor be paid time and a half time for all hours over forty. He said:

"Most workers in munition industries are working far more than 40 hours a week, and should continue to be paid at time and a half for overtime. Otherwise, their weekly pay envelopes would be reduced."

However, the president added:

"I believe that stabilizing the cost of living will mean that wages in general can and should be kept at existing scales."

The president called the "seven point" program an "equality of privilege." He said he preferred this term to either "economy of sacrifice" or "equality of sacrifice, because free American men and women "deem it a privilege rather than a sacrifice to work and to fight for the perpetuation of the democratic ideal."

Mr. Roosevelt stressed that before this year is over the United States will expend about $200,000,000 every day of the week for war purposes.

"This means that a sum equal to more than half of the entire national income will be spent on the war effort," Mr. Roosevelt said.

". . . profits must be taxed to the utmost limit consistent with continued production.

"This means all business profits —not only in making munitions, but in making or selling anything else. Under the proposed new tax law we seek to take by taxation all undue or excess profits."

The president left it up to congress to define what constitutes undue or excess profits.

Mr. Roosevelt said he did not think legislation would be required for stabilization of wages. He thought that stabilizing the cost of living "will mean that wages in general can and should be kept at existing scales.

Existing machinery for labor disputes, the president added, will give consideration to "inequalities" in remuneration and to "the elimination of substandards of living." He praised organized labor for giving up its right to strike during the war.

Mr. Roosevelt made only two specific recommendations for new legislation. One dealt with taxes; the other with farm prices. The recommendations were:

1. A tax bill to "keep excess profits down and, at the same time, raise further large sums for the financing of the war....such action is imperative."

2. A bill to restore actual "parity" to farm prices, but which will prevent any farm item going above parity, in order to prevent "a dangerous increase in the cost of living for the average family over present prices."

All his other recommendations, Mr. Roosevelt said, can be carried out under existing law.

On the question of rationing, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"It is obviously fair that where there is not enough of any essential commodity to meet all civilian demands, those who can afford to pay more for the commodity should not be privileged over others who cannot.

"I am confident that as to many basic necessities of life rationing will not be necessary, because we shall strive to the utmost to have an adequate supply. But where any important article becomes scarce, rationing is the democratic, equitable solution."

In regard to farm prices, the president recommended that the present opportunity of the farmer to obtain 110 per cent of parity be reduced to parity. He said this move would call for legislative action.

"In fairness to the American people as a whole, and adhering to the purpose of keeping the cost of living from going up I ask that this (the present 110 per cent of parity) formula be corrected, and that the original and excellent objective of obtaining parity for the farmers of the United States be restored."

The president said that he was opposed, at present, to any compulsory savings plan.

REGISTRATIONS END AT 9 P. M.

5,000 Enroll in Richland's Manpower Poll in 2 Days; Stations Still Busy.

county men—the number first was expected to be no more than 7,500 but the rush of registrations Saturday, Sunday, and again today led to upward revision of estimates—are among 700,000 Ohioans and 13,000,000 men throughout the nation who will be included in this registration.

Leading the men of the nation was President Roosevelt, the commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy, who set aside a few moments of his precious time to add his name to the rising roster of America's available manpower. Many other government officials and men prominent in various walks of life also were among today's registrants.

Today, from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m., was the official registration date proclaimed by President Roosevelt, but Ohio draft authorities provided for registration also on Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Close to 3,000 registered at the 22 points provided for registration in the county on Saturday afternoon, and approximately 2,000 more on Sunday.

The 22 registration points were busy again this morning, from opening time throughout the day. Each individual registration consumes from six to 10 minutes. All men who registered this week-end will be mailed occupational questionnaires on which they will show every professional and trade skill they possess, so that the country may make use of that skill in producing supplies for the battle front.

Unlike the three previous registrations, the men catalogued today are not liable for compulsory military service.

Men between 18 and 20 are subject to registration now under the law, but no date has been set for enumerating them. Meanwhile, they are being encouraged to enlist. Like the 45-65 group, they are not subject to military duty in the draft.

Today's nose-counting was the first since the present emergency and the second since the United States entered the war. When completed, about 40,000,000 men from 20 through 64 will have been registered.

Women will be asked to register voluntarily at a later date.

Officials of the three draft boards announced today that men in the 45-64 age classification who have been unable to register due to illness or other incapacitation should telephone their draft boards, and that provision will be made in the next few days for registering them at their homes.

Telephone numbers of the three boards are as follows: Draft Board 1, for the city of Mansfield west of Main street, 3518-6; Board 2, for the city east of Main street, 1606-6; Board 3, for the county outside of Mansfield proper, 2291-6.

HITLER MOVE HINTS TROUBLE IN GERMANY

Fuehrer Made Supreme Master of Nation at His Own Request.

some move so desperate that its accomplishment will necessitate a purge."

Most British reaction reflected the surmise of the Daily Mail that "the shadow of opposition" has risen within the third reich.

The Moscow radio called the speech "a sure sign that the Nazis see the approach of their end" and declared that Hitler's assumption of still greater power "made it abundantly clear that he had no other alternative than to admit his utter failure in the field and at home."

As broadcast by the Berlin radio, Hitler turned from his assurances that the next winter would find Germany ready on the Russian front and made this demand:

"For this purpose, I expect, however, one thing: that the nation entitles me to intervene and act myself, immediately, in every case wherein the service of the greater cause which decides on our existence not the strictest, unreserved obedience is shown . . .

"I therefore beg of the German reichstag explicit confirmation that I am legally entitled to hold anyone to his duties or to sentence to cashiering or to oust from office and position anyone without consideration of his person . . . who in my conscientious opinion does not fulfill his duties."

Radio listeners in London said they detected excitement in Hitler's voice when he dealt with this phrase of his message which, in widespread British opinion, was the chief reason for the speech.

As soon as he had finished the 61-minute speech, Reichsmarshal Goering, president of the reichstag, re-emphasized Hitler's account of the staggering problems of the winter front in Russia and asked the reichstag to "confirm" this statement.

"There can be no doubt that the fuehrer at the present time, when the German people is involved in a struggle for its existence, must be accorded the right asked by him to be fully empowered to do everything which serves to achieve victory or contributes to it.

"The fuehrer, consequently, without being tied down by existing laws and regulations, in his capacity as leader of the nation, as supreme commander of the armed forces, as chief of the government, supreme holder of executive power, supreme lord of justice and as leader of the National Socialist party, must be in a position at any time to make every German—be he soldier or officer, petty or high official or judge, official of the party, worker or employer—to do his full duty, and to remove from office, rank or position anyone who after the fuehrer's careful examination has violated his duties. . . .

"The fuehrer is to be entitled to take action against those people without having to take recourse to the usual procedure. . ."

Goering asked for a rising vote of consent and the Berlin radio said the reichstag, in whose midst were many in the field gray of Hitler's army, "rose as one man."

Second only to his preoccupation with the home front, Hitler devoted his first speech since last Dec. 11 chiefly to the war in Russia.

"The fighting in the east will be continued," he promised his people despite the acknowledged difficulties.

"The bolshevist colossus will be beaten by us so long and until such time as it has become smashed."

Although he promised ultimate victory, the man who once declared that the Russian "enemy already is broken and will never again rise," set no date for triumph and indicated to the Germans that they must fight through another winter.

Explaining why Germany's armies were forced back, Hitler said the past winter came suddenly and was the most severe in 140 years—since Napoleon's retreat from Moscow.

"The problem which in those days caused us the greatest trouble," he said, "was the bringing up of supplies because neither the German soldier nor the German tank nor, unfortunately, our German railway engines were prepared for such cold which had caught us surprisingly. . .

". . . I hake taken measures necessary for preventing a repetition. In the coming winter . . . the army in the east will be better equipped."

Otherwise, the speech ran the same gamut as Hitler's in the past—a reiteration of "endless German efforts for maintenance of peace." predictions of dire catastrophe for the British empire and imprecations against the "Jewish international parasites."

Hitler's Demands 'Astonish' Nazis

LONDON— (AP) —Reuters said today that the Berlin corrospondent of the National Zeitung of Basel, Switzerland, had cabled that the German public "was astonished at Hitler's demand yesterday for such far reaching powers."

The writer was quoted as saying it was "the sharpest appeal ever made to the German people."

Reuters quoted the Berlin correspondent of the Baseler Nachichten of Basel as saying the German capital was "surprised that Hitler was silent on past German successes and that his usual prediction as to the course of events was lacking.

Mrs. Stone ignored his warnings, however, and as soon as the robbers left, ran into the restaurant and telephoned Sheriff Hammond.

Hammond and the Loudonville authorities questioned the Stones and their customers and, learning that both men were dark complexioned, they raided a Gypsy camp near Hayesville. Hammond said that no suspects were found at the camp, however, and no arrests were made.

Stone said that the man with the gun was about 37 years old, weighed about 155 pounds, and wore a grey suit, while his helper was about 32 years old, weighed 130 pounds, wore a brown suit and had a blunt nose. The robebrs were seen driving away in a light-colored sedan but the Stones were unable to supply the license number, except for the prefix "U."

RAF PUSHES AIR ATTACK; REDS WIN IN FINLAND

Soviets Aim at Knocking Finns Out of War; Rostock Hit For Fourth Night.

of Bath was "bombed with powerful effect," and the sinking of a patrol boat in "waters around Iceland."

British air power was coming as close as it could to opening up a second European front while the Germans still dallied, with a great diversion of their air power, on the Russian front.

In his reachstag speech on Sunday, Adolf Hitler dropped a hint of expectancy that the war would go into another winter.

He spoke of Russia as the only front on which the war would be fought—whatever such a statement is worth.

Franz Von Papen, his ambassador to Turkey, appeared today to be trying to impress that thesis on the uneasy Turks. Reuters, in London, quoted a French News Agency dispatch from Istanbul which in turn quoted Von Papen as having told friends that Germany could not open any new front this year; that she must defeat Russia before fall because she could not face a fourth winter of war there.

Hitler's promises yesterday of reprisal against the British, of a great victorious decision to be worked out by the Germans on the eastern front and of a rule in Germany leaving not even a Nazi judge or an army officer to intervene between the gestapo and dissidents at home or at the front must have had only a distracted audience, if any, at Rostock.

The fuehrer's message to the Supine Reichstag at Kroll opera house was followed by the Berlin radio's early morning announcement:

"British bombers last night continued their terror raids on residential quarters in Rostock. Houses were again damaged and there were killed and injured among the civilian population. Two British bombers were shot down."

In planes downed the German announcement of two was not much as compared to past claims and British admissions. It indicated perhaps that Germany's defenses, at least in the Rostock area, had broken down.

But Hitler was striving to make good his threat of reprisal. Bath, 100 miles west of London, underwent its second successive night raid. Last night's was "short and sharp" with extensive damage and "fairly heavy" casualties. The assault was not so heavy as on Saturday night, however, and the raids could nowise be compared with those at Rostock.

No other German or British city had received such a pounding as Rostock in so short a time.

Fires set on three previous nights were still ablaze last night, beckoning the RAF men to their targets. New bombs were sent to burst in the Heinkel aircraft works, the London air ministry said, and fresh fires plumed up.

A German interceptor plane was destroyed by one of the bombers over the North Sea, evidently the route to Rostock which lies about 200 miles inside Reich territory.

Besides the return trip to Rostock, docks at Dunkerque were bombed again, mines were strewn anew in enemy waters and an enemy supply ship was set afire by bombs off the Danish coast.

The British acknowledged three bombers and one fighter missing from the night operations and said four German bombers were destroyed and a number of others damaged over England during the night.

Leningrad Beats Off Nazi Fliers

KUIBYSHEV, Russia—(UP)—Russian ground and air defenses shot down 35 of 165 planes which attacked Leningrad in a two-day mass raid, breaking a 20-day lull, a Soviet communique said today.

Three more enemy planes were damaged so badly by the Russian fighter planes and anti-aircraft batteries that they made forced landings in German-occupied territory, it said.

The raids started Friday night with 72 bombers and 10 Messerschmitt fighters. Twenty-four were shot down.

At noon, Saturday, 63 bombers and 20 fighters raided the city and the Russians shot down 11. The Soviet losses were five planes.

A Russian warship operating in the Barnets sea, north of Scandinavia, reported sinking a German submarine. The Barnets sea is a vital passage on the British-American supply line to Murmansk.

(Radio Berlin, heard by the United Press in London, said German planes raided Murmansk Sunday, shooting down nine Russian fighters, of which eight were Hurricanes. Later, it said, Russian bombers attempted to attack German military objectives and five were brought down by German fighters.

sit passively in their present island ledgements while the Allies build up a striking force in Australia, they said.

By this reasoning the Japanese would have to attempt one of three courses—invade Australia, broaden the island invasion front with a view to cutting American supply routes to Australia or attack New Zealand.

The recent landing of American troops on the French island of New Caledonia — subject of a pending protest by Vichy to Washington—was viewed by observers in Australia as a move to thwart Japanese expansion to the east on the flank of the supply route to Australia.

It was reported that the Japanese have been concentrating fresh invasion forces and material in their Marshall islands in apparent preparation for some new operation which may bring the United States fleet into action.

Some observers foresaw the possibility of a great naval battle somewhere between Hawaii and New Zealand.

In Burma it was a question whether the hard-pressed British imperials and their Chinese comrades-in-arms could stay the Japanese push until the monsoon rains come with their prospect of hindering Japanese communications.

At present the defenders were imperiled by two new thrusts, according to London reports: one a drive from Loilem on the eastern flank of the line, toward the Mandalay-Lashio road, threatening the two cities joined by the highway, and the other an infiltration to the west aimed at isolating the Allies in the Pyawbwe area, about 85 miles south of Mandalay.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, APRIL 27, 1942.

The idea of adjourning politics for the duration appears to be popular with everybody except the politicians.

Reports that German morale is getting low will sound more convincing when they come from other than Nazi sources.

If he whizzes along the street at 50 miles an hour, then stops ten minutes to chat with a friend in another car, he's under 17—and driving his Dad's auto.

Older Registrants Eager To Serve

YOUNG, old, or middle-aged, the manhood of America is not far removed from thoughts of war. Intervals of peace have been devoted, on a number of occasions each year, to keeping alive the memory of valiant deeds on the field of battle and paying tribute to those who served their country or gave their lives in its behalf.

Those of Revolutionary ancestry are justly proud of that ancestral strain and this extends also to the sons and grandsons of men who were soldiers in the Civil war, participants or children of Spanish-American war veterans, and all who had a part in the more recent World war.

Although there was a settling to the ways of peace for a couple of decades after the 1918 armistice, the blood of soldier ancestors has coursed too strongly through the veins of Americans to make readjustment to war conditions a difficult task.

The young men have shown this in their quick response to the nation's call for volunteers and for trainees under the selective service act. Enrollment of those in the 35-45 age bracket also evidenced the martial strain of a vast majority of men who may yet be called upon to follow in the steps of their heroic forebears.

And now comes the check-up of American manpower between the ages of 45 and 65, and the attitude of these men, as it was observed Saturday afternoon, yesterday and today at various registration places, was plainly that of deep interest and ardent desire to do whatever is within their power to co-operate in the national war effort.

All in this group had vivid recollections of the events of the World war, either as military or civilian participants; others had memories of the Spanish-American war; some were sons of Civil war veterans—and many expressed regret that they had passed the age of acceptance for actual military service in this war.

But there will be something that each of these men can do—some necessary things that must be done on the home front to assure victory for the nation's fighting forces—and the recognition accorded by this registration will do much to give further emphasis to the fact that all who enjoy America's privileges are expected to share its responsibilities.

Outings Will Be Closer Home

MANSFIELD parks are likely to attract more attention, and larger crowds, this summer than for a number of years.

The habit of motoring long distances over the week-end, or on Sunday, will be less common this summer, because of the need to conserve tires, gasoline and automobiles.

This will result in more people making use of local parks and near-by pleasure spots for picnics, outings, family gatherings and the customary summer sports and recreation.

Mansfield has long been noted for the expanse and beauty of its parks, which are conveniently accessible to residents of all parts of the city, and there should be no neglect of doing immediately whatever is needed to place all of them in readiness for the coming summer's use—with increased facilities wherever possible.

Tobacco as Wartime Essential

AN ITEM to the effect that Congressman Cooley, of North Carolina, and Congressman McMillan, of South Carolina, have asked that tobacco be declared an essential wartime commodity, is surprising only in that it reveals that such action has not already been taken.

It is contended by these congressmen from states in which tobacco is an important agricultural and industrial product, that unless this rating is given the industry will be handicapped by a curtailed supply of glycerine and sugar used in processing tobacco "which is used extensively by soldiers and is essential to civilian morale."

When it is recalled that Admiral Byrd, when selecting the personnel for his Antarctic expeditions, was careful to choose non-users of tobacco, because of fear of consequences in the event of their being deprived of a supply in some remote region, it can be seen that need for tobacco, among those who have formed the habit, is sufficiently great to classify it as "essential," either in the armed forces or in the preservation of civilian morale.

This was recognized in World war I, when a considerable effort was made to keep soldiers overseas supplied with tobacco and present requirements will be much greater as comparatively few women were among tobacco users at that time.

This is a matter which non-users of tobacco will find it difficult to understand—and they might just as well not try.

Those Surprising Commandos

A THRILL runs through this country, and doubtless through the army now shaping, at the announcement from Gen. George C. Marshall, American chief of staff, that "the time for action is near." And there is no less a thrill in the further announcement that American troops "inevitably will join the Commandos."

That type of British shock force, operating in small but growing units, and raiding the German-occupied continent more and more effectively, appeals strongly to Americans. It is very individualistic, in striking contrast with the mass-battles of the last war. Instead of standing up and slugging it out to the bitter end, the Commandos dash in, hit, smash and run. They operate mostly at night, and the secrecy of such procedure is another glamorous factor.

This form of warfare cannot do away entirely with mass fighting but such fast operations, by air, with the advantage of surprise, have been accomplishing enough to justify further development of the new technique and strategy.

Laval's name is spelled the same forward and backward, neatly symbolizing his principles and career.

Few people get everything they want but many get more than they deserve.

Raid Japan to Weaken Attacks

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — Admiral Thomas Hart and other military figures have made it clear that, important as morale may be, it will be necessary, before this war can be ended, to defeat the enemy in battle—on land, on sea, and in the air.

The spectacular airplane raid from Australia to the Philippines, followed so quickly by the raids on Tokyo, were NOT merely for purposes of morale, as so many have assumed. As a matter of fact morale was tremendously important in the Tokyo raid, but it was Chinese, not Japanese morale that was really important even in that. None of the leading figures directing the military moves of the United Nations has any delusions about Japanese morale.

The two raids were designed, first and foremost, to compel Japan to weaken her far-flung attacks by holding planes on the home islands for their defense instead of sending them as replacements to Burma, the Philippines, Java and elsewhere. Even in Burma, where she has been enormously successful in pushing toward her objectives, Japan has been paying a very high price in loss of planes — and aviators. This would make little difference if the lost planes are promptly replaced.

BECAUSE of the difficulty in getting supplies — and new planes—to the Flying Tigers, Japan could afford almost any ratio of losses that might be necessary, and be sure of victory in the end.

But Japan does not yet know how serious is the bombing threat for her home land. If the raids are to continue, and perhaps grow heavier, she cannot afford to risk weakening her home defenses by sending all the air strength called for by her admirals and generals from the Siberian border to the gates of Australia.

Bear in mind that this general strategy of the United Nations—forgetting entirely the question of morale—has been aimed for some time now at accomplishing just this. The raid on Wake Island was part of it. Before that the raid on the Caroline Islands by the fleet.

So far as air power is concerned, the Japanese have been put at the same disadvantage which the United Nations have suffered since the beginning of the war. They have had to be ready everywhere, not knowing where the Axis powers would strike.

This is still true so far as Hitler's operations are concerned, save for the very definite crimp the Russians have put in that menace. But Japan has struck virtually everywhere she can except at Siberia, and now, still confining the consideration to air power, she has a lot of vulnerable spots where she must always be prepared to resist air attack.

To that extent she is weakened in her continuance of the offensive. Unfortunately this applies only to air attack. She seems to have control of the sea in the entire area in which she is operating. She is known to have more troops than she knows how to use for the present.

BUT this last is seriously affected by the danger of air attacks in ANY of her operating areas. The question of supply becomes serious in the face of that threat. She will not dare—assuming the threat can be continued—to move troops or supplies by sea except when escorted by ample air power.

This necessity will constitute another element in the pressure to provide ample air defense everywhere, the only sort of pressure, for the time being, that the United Nations can apply.

I Would Not Forget

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

NOT easy business, this coming back from weeks of helplessness and hopelessness into a world of war. Not easy business facing these hundreds of tear-stained, fear-warped letters. Desperate mothers seeing their boys sent away. Stricken fathers seeing all the pride and plans of their life wiped out. Empty homes where the young feet no longer race the stairs, where young laughter no longer chimes with the radio.

Dark days for America, empty, aching days ahead for American hearts. Small wonder that a frantic mother recently cried to me, "If I could only forget. It was so sweet to have him, but this pain is too terrible. Not even to know where he is . . . not to know when he may go . . . only to sit and wait—"

What can I answer?. I can answer this. I, too, have known a house grown still . . . stairs that no longer echo . . . a face that will never come back.

BUT I WOULD NOT FORGET IF I COULD.

There are many adventures in life. There are many glorious challenges to one's courage. But I know of no more noble adventure, no taller challenge, than the challenge of love.

This is always true. It is especially true now when war is upon us and our hearts may be broken any hour. But if your heart is a real American heart you will never cry, "If I only could forget!"

Do not try to forget.

Thank God that you can remember.

Thank God for every ray of love that came to you, for every proud dream you ever dreamed, for every tender hope you ever cherished.

Thank God that you were permitted to know the everlasting glory of love, whatever it may have cost.

I do not write this lightly. My boy also will never come back. Whether your boy lies in Bataan or Burma, you have found a shrine. And there it will stand invincible against all the tanks. You have known love and that is life's highest initiation.

I WOULD NOT FORGET IF I COULD—NOT ONE LAUGH—NOT ONE PANG—FOR THESE ARE THE THINGS WHICH HAVE LIFTED ME FROM THE BRUTE TO THE STATURE OF A PARTNER OF GOD. HE FIRST BREATHED LIFE BUT I CARRIED IT ON. I WILL NOT. AS LONG AS MY STRENGTH HOLDS OUT, BOW MY HEAD IN TEARS OR REGRET BEFORE THAT GREAT HONOR.

Death is coming to America in a terrible, dark tide. But however dark the tide or deep the anguish, it can never blot out the glory and pride of having given life.

MOTHERS AND FATHERS OF AMERICA, REMEMBER THAT. REMEMBER THAT IF YOUR HOUR COMES, AS MY HOUR CAME, DO NOT CRUMBLE. DO NOT WEEP OR REGRET. LIFT YOUR HEADS HIGH. BUILD A SHRINE. YOU HAVE STOOD BESIDE GOD AS THE SUN ROSE ON A NEW LIFE. NOTHING CAN EVER TAKE THAT FROM YOU.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Merry-Go-Rounder Takes Survey, Finds People Want Firm Action

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—One of the Merry-Go-Rounders recently has taken a quick look-see at a cross-section of the U. S. A. from Kansas to Wisconsin and from South Carolina to New York.

The net result of that survey is that, contrary to some accusations made in Washington, we are convinced the American people are not complacent. Most of them are quite the contrary.

Unquestionably there are oases of complacency in some of the large cities, especially Chicago, where some of the people always have been lulled into isolationist do-nothingism. In New York City also there is some of the golden glitter, profiteering and the war-is-like-a-football-game attitude which featured Paris before its fall.

But in the rest of the country, so far as this observer could see, this was not the case. The people are alarmed, worried, ready to buy bonds, economize on rubber, save tin, knit, eat less, send their boys away, and even be patient—which is the hardest thing of all to do.

In fact they would like to have a lot more to do. If anything, they are impatient because they cannot do more.

But the one big thing they want is to see a little more clearly what is ahead for the country. Most of them, even including staunch Democrats, are considerably miffed with Roosevelt, but most of them, even including staunch Republicans, are willing to play along with Roosevelt during the war.

Shocked at Washington.

THEY don't like his doddering cabinet. They are shocked at some of the scandals unearthed in Washington. They think Roosevelt is too soft-hearted with his friends, and if anyone is complacent they think it is the president himself for keeping so much deadwood heaped up in Washington when it is time to get tough and use the pruning knife.

However, they are willing to go along with the president despite this very definite resentment—until the war is over. After that there is going to be the biggest political turnover in history—and the turnover probably will start next November, as far as the house of representatives is concerned.

There is a similar sentiment in regard to the British. Most people feel toward the British as one feels toward a cousin who is having a tough time and gotten you into a lot of trouble but you have to stick by him. In other words, the American people, as far as the Merry-Go-Round could ascertain, will fight for the British to the very end, but reserve the right to cuss them to the very end.

They know that the British have got to win, just as they know that Roosevelt has got to remain the leader of this nation. But they are looking for some very revolutionary changes in the old British empire when this war is over.

And of all Britishers, Churchill seems almost the least popular. The south and midwest didn't particularly like his nude bathing at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., after his December visit with Roosevelt; but much more than that people think Churchill exudes too much charm and they suspect Roosevelt is taken in by it.

However, despite all that, they will plug along and plug hard for both Roosevelt and Churchill. Only they don't want to be pampered. They don't want to be catered to. They don't want to be told anything but the truth. And most of all they don't want to be called complacent.

In brief the American people are ready to take it—the good and the bad—and make the best of it.

"I Knew Stalin."

A LOT of people have now come back from Moscow to join the "I know Stalin" club—Harry Hopkins, Admiral Standley, Averell Harriman, Bill Batt—and many are strong in their private praise of him.

But the person in Washington who probably knows Stalin best is the former Princess Mdivani, now Mrs. Dennis Conan Doyle, daughter-in-law of the famous English mystery writer. Mrs. Doyle is a Georgian, from south Russia, as Stalin is. Her family and his lived not far from each other.

"I am a White Russian and a refugee," says Mrs. Doyle, "but I can't help but admire Stalin's ability. People think he is complex, but that is because he is so simple. When he wants something he takes the straightest line toward it. And he knows what he wants. That is his great strength.

"He does not go in for speeches. He does not like ceremony. He is simple and sincere. He is a yes or no man."

Note—Because his wife knew Russia well, young Conan Doyle offered to go to Russia for the British government in any capacity. But the staid old British foreign office had the jitters—just as it did when Sir Stafford Cripps first went to Russia on his own and was so successful that the British later had to appoint him ambassador.

Guns for Uncle Sam.

HERE'S a suggestion from William N. Bemis, Ashburnham, Mass., on how World war veterans can contribute toward winning the war.

Recently the war department appealed to hunters to contribute any high-powered rifle they may have to the army. Bemis' proposal goes this one better—namely, that veterans turn over to the army .45 automatics and any other military weapons they took home from the last war.

A veteran, Bemis sent to the Washington Merry-Go-Round an automatic he used for ten months while in the service with a request that it be given the army. Army ordnance officers accepted the gift with warm thanks and expressed the hope that many other veterans would follow his patriotic example.

So if you have a gun of military value send it to the office of the Chief of Ordnance, War Department, Washington, D. C.

What Age Volunteers.

CHIEF point of controversy during the house naval affairs committee hearings on the bill to create a women's auxiliary in the naval reserve was the age limit of the volunteers.

Representative Melvin Maas of Minnesota, author of the legislation, favored a minimum age of 17, but others, including Representative Joseph B. Shannon of Missouri disagreed.

"I think it would be wrong to bring in women under 20," said Shannon. This set off a clatter of opinions from other members, who began talking at the same time, advocating various ages from 18 to 25.

Finally committee Chairman Carl Vinson rapped for order. "I like 17," he said, which brought another uproar.

When quiet was restored, Vinson explained that he thought 20 years was probably a better age for the girl volunteers, who will have to drive motorcars and do other strenuous jobs as well as office work for the navy.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—D'ju know:

That Barry Wood, singing star of the Hit Parade, and Oscar Levant, music expert of Information Please, were brothers-in-law? . . . They're married to two of the four Gale sisters.

That Ernest Hemingway, who is secluded in his Cuban home working on a novel, was compelled to break his own resolution not to write to anybody in the states until the novel was completed? . . . His dermatician, Gloria Bristol, has a letter from him asking for a bottle of special hair tonic . . . to prevent falling hair.

That writing for the eye is one thing, and writing for the ear is quite another? . . . Star reporters of a metropolitan newspaper found this out recently when they were assigned by their editors to prepare script for a news broadcast. . . . After reading their initial scripts, the editor hurriedly arranged a little course in "ear" writing for his scribes.

THAT the most discussed non-fiction book to come out of the war this year is "Defense Will Not Win The War," by Lt.-Col. W. F. Kernan?

That the Tamiris dancers at the Rainbow Room do ballet and interpretative dancing to Negro Spirituals—because they are the purest essence of native American music?

That John Hoysradt, the actor and mimic is an ex-school teacher whose students included the sons of the president of the United States?

That General Douglas MacArthur's first statement to the press upon his arrival in Australia has been recorded and presented to newspapermen by the recording department of Station WOR?

That Johnny Green, the band leader and composer, is a captain in the New York Guard, and that Jack Dempsey is a 1st lieutenant in the same outfit?

THE guy who cut the Gordian knot has nothing on Lucky Millinder when it comes to brushing aside obstacles . . . This band leader was discussing the idea of a touring show fashioned after the old Chautauqua idea of a generation ago, to be played in the stadiums and open air arenas throughout the country. . . .

"But what about the weather?" someone wanted to know.

"Don't give it a thought," cried Lucky, "we'll play in the towns where it doesn't rain."

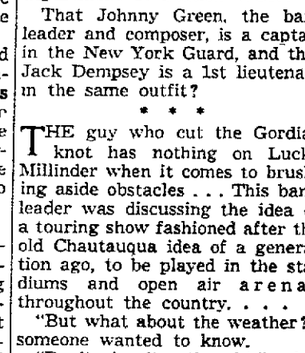
THE cycle of jokes spins more rapidly as the tempo of the times increases. . . . Not long ago Frank Morgan, on a broadcast, was asked if he knew anything about race horses. . . . "Do I know anything about horses!" he cried. "Why, I should say I do. The other day at Santa Anita I bent over to pick up a ticket and three jockeys jumped on my back."

Then, the other night, another comedian was discussing the rubber shortage. . . . "I'll tell you how bad it is," he said, "The other day I leaned over to pick up a dime and two mechanics jacked me up and stole my rubber heels."

This same gag was popular in the days of Sheridan, and I have no doubt that it will get laughs in 2042.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT



"The draft board wouldn't take his word that his wife was a dependent."

A Farmer's Diary

A Dog's Life

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I SELDOM slip away for a walk across the fields or up the slope into the woods, without our black and white spaniel dog observing the fact, and going along. She may be playing heartily upon the lawn with the children—one of them in a game of tag. Yet I have not gone more than a hundred yards until she is nosing and smelling the ground about my feet.

Although I feel alone, to think or dream at will, yet there is a companionship about her presence that warms my heart. If I am weary of the day and walk a little slower up the woodsy path, she senses that I am tired, and sits down to wait until I reach that place. If I stand and watch the silvery gleaming transport zooming noisily across the sky, she watches too, and seems to join me in marvelling at the modern miracle.

I'm sure she enjoys the walk even more than I. She investigates the home of every mouse—creeps deep into the burrow of every groundhog, sniffs and snorts. When finally she nervously moves out, with muddy nose, she looks at me as if she wonders why I am not more interested.

The chipmunk, chattering on a stump 20 feet away, challenges her and a race ensues, although she knows from past experience she will never catch him. Often as we move along, I see her stop, with head held high and long ears forward, absorbed in listening. My own ears seem stopped, compared with hers. Sometimes she puts her nose high in air and sniffs. One time she did this, for several seconds, then came close to me, trembling with fear. Another time she jerked her head in air, and became excited. She turned her head as if the owner of the scent were coming nearer. Finally she made a leap and a young rabbit bounded out 15 feet ahead.

During a spring shower, when thunder rolled heavily through the hills, she crept close to my feet, shaking. The sharp lightning made her howl. When I rushed for shelter from the sudden start of rain behind a large leaning maple, she followed meekly and lay upon the heavy roots. Shelter from the driving storm seemed more grateful to her, than to me. She enjoys an open fire in a way I can only hope to do. Her relaxed faith that all is well is so obvious that I am comforted to watch her rest. Only when nothing more worth while is going on, does she sleep, untroubled anywhere, anytime. I envy her.

Duncan Seffren, Manaua, Wis.

I find it difficult to cram into the bomber, between radio man and Turret Gunner Sergt. George McMannemy, Toledo, and Navigator Lieut. Charles L. Smith, Spartanburg, S. C.

Bombardier Lieut. George D. Barnhill, Charlotte, N. C., occupies the glass-domed nose. Somewhere toward the tail are enlisted men Fred J. Mickles, Salem, Ind., and H. E. Philo, Fort Wayne, Ind.

The engines roar, and we are hurtling along the runway. Herron, a wizard pilot, steadied the ship after we took off. The air speed needle creeps up.

Suddenly we meet a strong head wind and an overcast rain area. The inside of the ship is dark. Rain drops streak the windows. We are flying over the sea now and Herron is checking everything and everybody.

We come down slightly. Navigator Smith is busy with dividers and a chart. McMannemy moves aft to man the turret gun. Barnhill is studying a chart and a detailed photograph of our target. Herron grinningly invites me to take a position between the pilot and co-pilot.

"Over the target in 10 minutes," Smith says.

There is a white cloud bank ahead. Herron's forehead furrows. There is no time to climb over the cloud. We go straight through and there is Rabaul harbor, looking like a picture postcard, just ahead.

The altimeter is at 700 feet now. Herron croaks through his throat microphone.

I can see the target, long, parallel drab colored buildings. The bomb doors open.

"Let's go," says Barnhill.

I watch fascinated and see the wide spreading incendiary bomb sticks actually hit the target.

The roar of the motor intensifies. We start climbing.

The turret gunner reports a Japanese Zero on the starboard side.

"About 3 o'clock," he calls—noon is always ahead of us, and three o'clock is on our right side.

I see the Jap racing ahead. Herron is cursing. We increase speed but the Zero keeps a steady distance ahead. The rear gunner reports two more Zeros closing in on our tail. I spot a fourth on the port side. The bomber is still over the water, climbing.

Our rear guns chatter. I see tracers go in either side of the Zero, then into its belly. We are still plunging toward the water.

Barnhill does not waste time during this terrific dive. He is pouring bullets into barges carrying uniformed men. Now we go down to 75 feet.

Philo reports another Zero keeping on our tail. The gunner's language is sulphurous when his gun jams momentarily. He gets it right and fires a burst which sends the Zero zooming away.

Barnhill is suddenly singing wildly "I don't want to set the world on fire." We are high now but I don't know whether we are safe or not and I realized suddenly that I must have been scared all the time. The whole business from the time we sighted the target had taken about 15 minutes.

Herron is loosening his parachute straps. We must be safe now. I start grinning and soon everybody is laughing unrestrainedly. None of us knows why.

Turns Out Last Refrigerator As War Production Creeps Up

months, others have been laid off, a few at a time, as various "feeder" lines and parts sections were cut down in preparation for the stoppage of refrigerator production.

Today's suspension of refrigerator production brings to 700 the number of furloughs in the plant during the last two months. Many workers, of course, have entered the military services. Many in sales departments have been transferred to other plants of the company. In all, employment at Westinghouse has dropped more than 2,000 from its high of 5,000, and it is expected to sink considerably further in the next two months.

But the start has been made on production of war orders, and it is predicted there will be a gradual pick-up in employment after June as the conversion of plant facilities approaches completion.

Production of the last Westinghouse refrigerator for civilian use during this war was marked by a ceremony that symbolized the occasion well.

The last refrigerator—No. 2,058,334, was presented by the company to the Red Cross, and was accepted by L. W. Birch, chairman of the Richland county chapter, in behalf of National Red Cross officials. It will be placed in one of the nationwide network of bloodbanks which the Red Cross has established to store blood and plasma for military and civilian medical uses.

As the refrigerator stood at the end of the long assembly-conveyor line, final signatures were written by J. H. Ashbaugh, manager of the Westinghouse merchandising division, and Sidney Earhart, president of the local of the United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers union.

"We do not look on this refrigerator as the end of our peacetime business activities, but as the beginning of our total conversion to war production," Ashbaugh said. "Even this machine, which was built as a part of a pool of refrigerators manufactured by government authorization, is going out to do its wartime part."

The refrigerator's stell shell was signed in indelible ink by every worker who participated in the final asembly line shift. The shell then was enameled and baked in a big oven. The markings "bled" through the enamel, making the signatures permanent.

Manufacture of freezer units and compressors for refrigerators came to an end more than a week ago at the company's plant in East Springfield, Mass. These units are shipped to Mansfield, where the refrigerator cabinets are made and final assembly takes place.

Manufacture of vacuum cleaners, which is centered at Springfield, will end this week. Manufacture of small household appliances, such as roasters, electric irons, waffle bakers, and sandwich grills will come to a stop on May 31. Production of automatic washers also will stop shortly, and range production has been materially reduced and may be suspended altogether.

Ashbaugh estimated that more than 30,000,000 Westinghouse appliances are now in use in American homes. These, he said, provide a "reservoir of household equipment which will be a backlog of electrical living for many years."

He added that Westinghouse plans to carry on its service and repair activities intensively in order to keep Westinghouse appliances now in the field in good working order.

ALLEGED 'TORTURE SLAYER' MOVED TO PEN FOR SAFETY

(By International News Service)

PUEBLO, Colo. — Worried by the presence of a threatening mob, Police Chief J. Arthur Grady and Sheriff Tom Murphy, today rushed Donald M. Fearn, 26, alleged "torture slayer" of a high school girl to the Colorado penitentiary at Canon City for safekeeping.

Fearn was taken to the penitentiary after he had signed a confession, according to Grady and Murphy, that he had lashed pretty Alice Porter, 16, with hot wires before attacking and shooting her in a lonely farmhouse.

The girl, daughter of a former Pueblo policeman, had been missing since Wednesday. Neighbors who saw her leave two friends two blocks from her home later heard a scream and saw a tan sedan drive away.

A garage mechanic who pulled a machine of the same color from the mud near Pueblo Wednesday night led to discovery of the body. Investigator E. A. Norse visited the scene and discovered "the most horrible case we have known in years."

Fearn, whose wife is in a Pueblo hospital with a daughter born last Tuesday, was identified as owner of the car. After hours of questioning, Grady and Murphy said he admitted abducting the girl, driving with her to the farmhouse and forcing her to disrobe.

Then, according to the confession, he lashed her with hot wires, criminally attacked her and knocked her unconscious with a hammer. Later, the officers, said, he shot her in the head with a .32-caliber revolver and stuffed her body in a 10-foot cistern.

Westinghouse Club To Meet On Wednesday

With the nation's nutrition spotlight focused on its continually growing success, the country's first "Health for Victory" Club—made up of wives and homemakers of Westinghouse employes — will hold its third monthly meeting in the Company auditorium Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. Headlining the Club meeting program will be Dr. Mark Graubard, director of nutrition in industry, for the federal security administration in Washington D. C.

Because of the nation-wide attention which this Westinghouse "Health for Victory" Club has created, Mr. Graubard is coming to Mansfield to appear on the program and spend another day in conference with Mrs. Julia Kiene, manager of Westinghouse home economics, who originated and directs the club.

Dr. Graubard's FSA responsibility is directing nutrition programs in American industry. He first met Mrs. Kiene in Detroit, Michigan, April 8, where they both appeared on a "Homemakers Victory Program." Hearing of the Mansfield "Health for Victory" Club for the women who cook for Westinghouse workers, he indicated his desire to get first hand information by attending one of the club's monthly meetings.

Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, selected Dr. Graubard, a national authority on nutrition, to direct the industrial nutrition program, which is considered vital in keeping the industrial front operating at top efficiency by improving the health of the worker through better food habits. For a number of years Dr. Graubard travelled all over the world studying food habits. This work was sponsored by the Rockefeller Foundation. Previously he directed research in bio-chemistry for Clark Institute in Worcester, Mass. Earlier he was an instructor of bio-chemistry at Columbia University.

Mrs. Kiene will be in charge of the club's Wednesday meeting, and will introduce Dr. Graubard who will speak on the subject, "Food Habits of Other Countries." Mrs. Kiene would not reveal the subject of her part of the meeting, stating that it is a "Surprise Program." However, she assures every club member that timely and important information on the problems of selection and preparation of more nutritious meals will be given.

New menu-recipe guides for the month of May will be distributed to those attending. Two of these guides for the months of March and April have already been used by club members in aiding daily buying and preparation of food. This useful guide for May has just been prepared by the company's home economics department, and is based on latest market conditions, seasonal food factors, and workers' requirements.

Second Wife Plays Second Fiddle

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Seventeen years ago I married a widower with a two-year-old girl. The child was raised by my husband's mother, and is now 19 years old. His deceased wife's father passed away a few days ago and as they live 400 miles from here, his daughter notified him by telegram. Immediately my husband drove to the place to attend the funeral. He has made this trip several times since Christmas and the expense involved is considerable.

It has been this way through all the years. My husband is at the beck and call of his daughter or his first wife's relatives. When I ask him to take me out on a Sunday to visit some friends, he refuses, saying he doesn't like my friends. I always thought marriage was a fifty-fifty proposition, but in my case it's all one sided.

Miss Fairfax, why does a second wife have to play second fiddle all her married life? We have one child. UNHAPPY.

If you made no objection to taking your husband's daughter at the time of your marriage, his attitude is difficult to understand. Often the lovelorn widower agrees to almost any disposition of children by his first marriage to gain the second lady of his choice. But when she becomes an everyday story, this is chalked up against her. "You separated me from my darling children," he will wail.

I agree with you heartily that marriage is a 50-50 proposition, and it's only reasonable for you to be taken on some of those 400-mile motor trips that make a considerable hole in the family finances. The situation looks to me as if you were too easy with this husband of yours.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm 21 years old, married to a wonderful husband and have a child of three. I love my husband and want to make him happy, but I'm so jealous of him that I know I must make his life miserable. I acuse him of going with other girls, and think that every time he leaves the house he goes to meet a certain girl he used to go with before he married me, and who still loves him.

Just before our baby was born, we were separated about four months and I know he went with this girl then. I try to do everything to keep him in love with me, but if I happen to meet this girl in town, it just makes me see red, and I go home and cry.

How can I get confdence in him again? I'm not a good mixer and don't have many girl friends, although I want some very much. I love my child and husband very dearly and could be so happy if I weren't so jealous. My husband gives me all the hired help I want, so I don't have to turn my hand to a single thing. If ever a girl needed advice, I'm that one. MISERABLE.

When you have diagnosed your troubles so perfectly to me, why won't you see them in relation to your married life. Such jealousy as you describe is almost a disease, and it's cutting the ground of your domestic life from under your feet. You're in a strategic position. You're married to the man you love, you bear his name, you're the mother of his child, why, then, do you send your home life on the rocks by worrying over some former girl friend. Human nature being what it is, the flirt of a skirt will always attract a man momentarily.

You tell me you're not a good mixer; well, my dear, learn to be a good mixer. Make your home life so attractive that it will be a center of your husband's domestic happiness.

CLEANING WAFFLE IRONS

After using a waffle iron, remove all particles of batter with a stiff brush, wipe off quickly with a cloth dampened in hot water and dry with a soft cloth. Wrap up carefully or slip into an oil skin bag and store in a clean spot. The iron is then ready for the next time.

Pitfalls of Love

(A sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

That the captain of the state troopers deemed his message to me a most important one I knew from the stress in Gus's voice, and I lost no time in unfastening the door.

"I'm sorry to bother you," the captain said as he came into the room, but one of my men just overheard something one of those fellows said to another, when he thought nobody was listening, and I thought you ought to hear it right away.

"You see," he went on, giving an explanation I could have done without until after he gave me the meat of his message, "we tied up the lads who weren't hurt and put 'em on the side of the lawn near some bushes, and pretended to leave 'em alone. But one of our men crawled under the bushes on the other side of the hedge, and heard every word they said. It's a dodge we use sometimes, and I didn't think you'd mind."

"Mind!" I exclaimed. "I'm delighted. It's an exceedingly clever ruse. Why should I mind?"

Madge Approves.

"Well, after all," he said with a comradely grin, "it's your party—yours and your father's. We're always glad to help out the federal people when we can, but we don't aim to put in our two cents unless we think it's necessary. In this case it seemed to me it wouldn't be a bad idea to find out if they were planning something."

"It was a very good idea," I said with emphasis, and wondered if I dared risk a brisk "What did they say?" to hurry his revelation. I decided against it, and was glad when he spoke again that I had kept quiet.

"Here's what our man overheard," he said abruptly, and took a pad of paper from his pocket.

"He's a shorthand man, and when I sent another man over to relieve him, he wrote the stuff out in long hand.

"There isn't much of it," he said, looking at me doubtfully, "but I guess I'd better read it to you, unless you'd rather read it yourself."

Reads What Was Overhead.

"I'd much prefer to listen to you," I said with my fingernails clenched into my palms in a struggle to keep from adjuring him to hurry.

"Our man labeled the men 'Number One' and 'Number Two'," the captain went on, "and here's what they said:

"Number One (very low) — 'There's nobody near enough to hear us, is there?'

"Number Two—'No, they went back when they dumped us here. Nobody can hear you if you throttle your motor.'

"Then," and the captain looked a bit embarrassed "Number One cut loose with a lot of words that I don't believe you want to hear. They don't have any meaning, just oaths and filth that it seemed as if he had to get off his chest before he could say anything else."

"I understand," I said. "Just begin at the point where his words did have some meaning."

He began to read again.

"Number Two—'You'd better open your own radiator cap before the steam bursts. Where do you think Heinie and Ernie went? That note the captain took off the door looked phony to me.'

"You see," the captain looked up to explain, "we kept 'em guessing as to what had happened to the two who were here first, and gagged the poor old professor and his man. We didn't let these others get inside the house, because we didn't want to muss up the old man's rooms.

Showed Them the Note.

"But when we'd rushed 'em from behind the hedge, which took a little time—they're good fighters, whatever else they may be—we took the note off the door and held it up for 'em to read.'

'I see," I said commendingly. "That was very clever."

"They tried every question they could think of to find out what had become of their pals, the captain went on "but they didn't find out a thing, as you can see from this."

He went back to his reading.

"Number One—'How the hell do I know? Heinie may have taken a run-out powder. It would be just like the rat. Somebody must have tipped him off from New York that the dame was on her way.'

"The dame?" I gasped in bewildered astonishment.

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, April 28.

A memorably day with many things moving suddenly and dramatically toward a state of affairs which may have an enduring and far-reaching effect on the future with its fortunes, security and stability. While the unforeseen and unpredictable may be materialized there is likelihood of such a climax being the merited result of application, industry, patience and self-organized plans and objectives aimed at and hoped for over a considerable period. Such sudden and inspiring fulfillments should not, however, be negatived by a tendency to rash, impetuous conduct prompted by immature or designing advisers.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for an adventurous, progressive and solidifying year although such crisis may descend with sudden, surprising and breath taking or dramatic force. It may be an uprooting and dynamic force, descending like a whirlwind, but properly met and manipulated its splendid results should be enduring, far-reaching and sound. But rash, impulsive, and over eager or extravagant tactics may retard or ruin such splendid rospects.

"The Authority on Authorities"

TWO GREAT ADVANTAGES

Raising your partner's bid of a major, when you hold four cards of the suit, is doubly advantageous to your side as compared with bidding another suit in response. The first disadvantage of making a minimum takeout in another suit is that it tells your opponents something which may help them put up a killing defense against you. The second is that it may afford your opponents a chance to enter the bidding and either wind up in a contract of their own, or exchange information on how to beat yours, whereas raising your partner's suit might erect a barrier so high that they cannot risk bidding at all.

	♠ J 7 3 ♥ Q ♦ 7 3 ♣ K Q 10 8 4 3 2
♠ K 9 5 4 ♥ K 10 9 7 ♦ J 9 8 ♣ A J	N. W. E. S.	♠ A Q 2 ♥ J 8 4 3 2 ♦ A Q 4 ♣ 9 7
	♠ 10 8 6 ♥ A 6 5 ♦ K 10 6 5 2 ♣ 6 5

(Dealer: North North-South vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠
2 ♣	2 ♥	Pass	3 ♥
Pass	4 ♥

Against that bidding, South could not very well avoid leading a club, his partner's suit. Dummy's A took this, and thereafter it was impossible to avoid losing one trick each in three suits, so that declarer made exactly 4-Hearts.

At another table in this same duplicate game, the East-West pair profited from sounder bidding. After East bid 1-Heart and South passed, West jumped to 3-Hearts, and East bid 4. With no information, from either his partner or the declarer's side, on what to lead, South made the natural choice of the spade 10, which the A won. The heart 2 to K dropped the Q, and the 10 knocked out the A.

South now decided, all too late, that a club lead might be a good idea. The A took this, and the defenders never did get a club trick. The heart 9 dropped the last trump, and the spades divided evenly. East's losing club being put on the thirteener. The diamond finesse lost to the K, but that ended the trick-taking by the defense, an extra trick being made by the declarer.

Tomorrow's Problem.

	♠ 10 7 ♥ A K 9 7 3 ♦ Q 10 8 3 ♣ 6 2
♠ A J 4 2 ♥ Q 4 ♦ K 6 5 4 ♣ Q 5 4	N. W. E. S.	♠ K 9 3 ♥ J 10 8 ♦ 9 7 2 ♣ A K 8 7
	♠ Q 8 6 5 ♥ 6 5 2 ♦ A J ♣ J 10 9 3

(Dealer, South. Neither side vulnerable.)

If North takes the heart K, leads to the diamond A, and South returns the diamond J, how should West play this deal to make 2-Spades?

Gather all leftover cake and cookie crumbs and substitute a cupful for one of flour used in a plain baked or steamed pulling. Reduce the amount of sugar by 3 tablespoonfuls, too.

KINGS ROW + + + + +

CHAPTER XXXIII

Herr Berdorff had been gone two days and Parris was burning with a wearisome mixture of resentment and regret when Cary Whitehead called him. Whitehead, a lawyer with Colonel Skeffington's old firm, had called at the suggestion of Mrs. Skeffington, who hoped he might be able to do something for Benny Singer.

"Doctor, he's in serious trouble," Whitehead said. "Seems that a gang of half-grown kids around Jinktown have been nagging him, playing jokes and the like for a long time. This afternoon they were at it again, and this Singer fellow got a gun and shot into the gang—just outside his gate."

"Any of them seriously hurt?"

"He killed two of them, Dr. Mitchell."

Parris was favorably impressed with Mr. Whitehead. The young lawyer was intelligent-looking, quick and sympathetic. He seemed to understand Benny's case almost as well as Parris, although Parris reviewed for him the boy's early persecutions by Fulmer Green's gang and others; Madame von Eln's employment of Benny; the Colonel's interest in him. Benny had worked on for Mrs. Skeffington after the Colonel died.

The commission appointed to examine Benny Singer and pass on his responsibility for his acts consisted, to Parris' extreme dismay, of an antagonistic doctor, a pompous one, a substitute professor of psychology, a law partner of Fulmer Green, the new prosecuting attorney, and the Reverend Mr. Cole, with whom Parris had had words when he first returned to Kings Row.

Parris, acting chairman, controlled himself with the greatest difficulty through the courtroom proceedings. The discussion was personal, vindicative, unintelligent and stubborn. Parris had no hope of conciliating these inexplicably prejudiced men. Yet he elaborated his thesis of temporary insanity, basing his arguments on Benny's life as he had known it from the days in primary school. He argued hospital and rehabilitation against prison or gallows. He reminded them of society's duty to the weak and the deficient.

They were tight-lipped, unyielding. Dr. Cole, indignant and self-righteous, pivoted his judgment on a chance to repay Parris for that old altercation. Dr. Cole finished his expression of opinion with, "It is our duty to hand this murderer over to the arm of the law, and beyond that to trust in the mercy of the Lord Jesus Christ."

Parris arose and bowed slightly. "You have helped this afternoon to hand a helpless man over to legal murder. I seem to recall that another judge in circumstances not entirely dissimilar first washed his hands. I doubt, Dr. Cole, that such a simple procedure would serve to cleanse your own."

The color faded partly from the minister's face. He half choked over his words as he faced Parris. "Do you realize that you are actually likening this idiot murdered to Christ in—in this ridiculous and insulting comparison?"

"Dr. Cole, some of the simple people in this world—simple but deep and rich in wisdom—always speak of the mentally deficient as 'God's children'. You may remember that the mon whose name you use rather recklessly said: 'In as much as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me.' Remember?"

He turned to the staring group of men. "Good afternoon, gentlemen. I trust that all of you may be able to sleep well tonight."

Parris elbowed his way out of the crowded courtroom.

Benny had not really realized what was happening. He had smiled and looked interested through the whole day, while Fulmer Green ranted, rabble-roused, made jokes about the evidence, clowned, played for the death of a human being. Fulmer's gang behind him again, Parris told Drake and Randy. The pack—closing in for the last time.

"They're wild animals who have a thin coating of civil behavior," he went on. "Drake, I hate their kind of tyranny—a tyranny laid on the mind of man. It's deeply dangerous. Cole does it through religion and cant. Fulmer Green does it with demagogic methods that are as old as the world. Somebody has to stand up and call these things by their right names once in awhile."

There was no saving Benny. Sam Winters built the gallows. Parris walked with Benny up to them one balmy afternoon in early May, holding his arm and talking quietly.

Benny looked down at the group of upturned faces. Fulmer Green was there. Wardlaw, editor of the Chronicle. A small crowd had gathered on the roof of Hoxey's feed store overlooking the enclosure. A little of the bewildered look came back to Benny's eyes, and then he smiled—a childish, almost welcoming smile.

"Hello, everybody," he said.

That afternoon a small boy raced along past the little Singer house and around to the back porch of the house next door.

"Ma! I seen Mis' Singer!"

"Well, what of it? Where?"

"She's just a-standin' in them willow bushes down there."

"What's she doing down there, the poor woman?"

"She's just a-standin' there and when I come by she seen me and she kinder mooed at me and tore off a lot of them leaves and throwed 'em on the ground and stomped on 'em. I got scared, and I run home."

The woman turned from her washtub and dried her hands on her apron.

"I'll go down there and see if I can get her home. I guess she's near crazy."

"Will they lock her up in the asylum if she's crazy, Ma?"

"Shut up!" She gave the boy a resounding slap on the ear. "Go in the house and shut up, an' don't you come out of there, you hear me?"

* * *

Dr. Nolan leaned back in the creaking swivel chair and knocked the ashes from his pipe.

"I'm firing you for six months, Dr. Mitchell. Don't argue. You're too useful around here to take chances with. Need a rest."

"You mean I was."

"Are. You take things too hard. You've let this Benny Singer thing flatten you out."

"I think I'll go to Europe, sir. Zurich—"

"More work? Well, if that's what you want. Right away?"

"Yes."

"Free as that?" Dr. Nolan smiled, but he looked gravely after Parris as the door closed. He had been struck from the beginning by the peculiar solitariness of this hard-working young man.

Parris decided he'd look up Anna in Dusseldorf. Maybe Herr Berdorff in Bavaria. He could do exactly as he pleased because it didn't make any difference to anyone. For the first time he felt a little depressed about it.

Tonight the asylum sounds, sudden screams and shouts that thrust through the murmurous buildings, flicked his nerves like a lash. He walked slowly down to see Drake and Randy.

Drake had a lapboard across the bed and the wide table beside it was covered with papers.

"Business this time of night?"

Drake nodded. "We're getting rich."

"Good."

"We're starting a building and loan association, Parris." Randy was excited. "We're putting you in as silent partner. You don't have to do anything, but we want it fixed up properly—legally."

"Still talking about that Tower money?"

"Please, Parris—" Randy's expression was intent. Her eyes were telling him that he must consent, that this was final compensation, to Drake, for the money Parris had given them.

"All right. Fix it any way you want to. I don't know the first thing about business of any kind."

He told them that Dr. Nolan had insisted on a vacation.

"Are you going to be away long?" Drake's voice came hesitatingly.

"Dr. Nolan says six months."

"Gee, I'm glad for you."

Parris looked curiously at Drake, and then at Randy. He wanted very much to know if it mattered to them whether he went or stayed.

Back at the hospital gate, he circled the grounds and came out on Carrier street. In the second story room of a house at the end of the block there was a bright light. Vera Lichinsky sat at the window, her arms resting on the sash. Moonlight fell full on her face and whitened it to a stoney pallor. She was staring fixedly at the huge building facing her — the gloomy building that seemed even to Parris to crouch among the tall trees, and to wait.

Parris returned just in time to meet an early, disagreeable winter. The town was drab and shabby-looking. He shuddered with distaste as he viewed it. It was ugly because it was the outward expression of a way of thinking that was without such factors as made life and living itself an act of grace. Ugly on purpose. He realized that he was more European in tastes, if not in thinking, than he had ever guessed.

His work at the hospital was waiting, the entire staff rejoicing over the state's appropriation for extensive new buildings. A huge tract of land had been bought for a farm and vegetable garden. Dr. Nolan was full of plans.

Randy had lost her father while he was away and was quiet and sober in the one visit Parris had with her and Drake in the first few days after his return. They had "something exciting to tell him" but said it must wait.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

In spite of the dismal picture painted here yesterday of the summer sports outlook in Mansfield, there are still some sports going on.

Harry Mehock's track program continues in the Mansfield schools, as his Tyger tracksters roll merrily along on their undefeated way. They'll be meeting Columbus North in a twilight meet at Stadium field Friday at 7 p. m.

Plans are in full swing for a big track carnival at the high school field May 6, to include all of Mansfield's schools, and operated similarly to last winter's ice carnival.

Grade schools will compete in one big relay, the two junior high schools will have a dual meet, and high school athletes perform in an intramural affair

And queens are being elected today at the high school to reign over the May 6 event. It seems the thin-clads must have queens around to inspire their running and jumping and heaving.

John Simpson and Johnny Appleseed tracksters will perform this Thursday at 3:30 in the first of their telegraphic meets, Simpson matching marks with Huntington, W. Va., and Appleseed with Sandusky.

Actually the two junior high schools will be running against each other, but times and distances must be marked through all positions in each contest.

And the bowling banquet season continues on its merry, scarcy way this week, boosting the bicarbonate demand.

Tonight the Club league wields the knife and fork at the Southern hotel, and Thursday night finds the "A" leaguers doing likewise at the Eagles lodge, and the Thursday women's league at Mifflin Inn.

In short, sports of a sort are still up and snorting.

Blues Rush To Front In AA

Milwaukee Clings to Top In Standings.

(By Associated Press)

Kansas City's rush to the front in the young American Association baseball race has diverted attention from Milwaukee's early season surprise showing.

Colonel Hits for Indians

Mills' Pinch Single Wins Eighth Straight.

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

HIS real name is Colonel Mills, but the fans who watched him keep the Cleveland Indians in a first-place tie in the American league with a two-run single at Chicago yesterday, now know why his friends all call him "Buster."

* * *

Held to one hit by Johnny Rigney for seven innings, the Indians were about ready to kiss their winning streak goodbye. Then Jeff Heath opened the eighth for the Tribe with a single and Les Fleming followed suit.

Manager Lou Boudreau, who has surprised everyone else—if not himself—by the apparent miracle he has worked at Cleveland, wiped out half of the White Sox two-run lead with a double and looked around for a pinch-hitter after Ray Mack had been purposely passed to load the sacks.

His choice was Colonel (Buster) Mills, an outfielder who has shifted from the majors to the minors and back again more times than a pianist.

Buster lived up to his name by smacking a single that scored Fleming and Boudreau with the tying and winning runs.

The 3-2 triumph was the eighth straight for the fast-traveling Tribe, which kept even with the New York Yankees at the top of the American league.

The Yankees, meanwhile, exploded as usual in one big inning, pushing over six runs in the third at Boston and coasting to a 7-2 decision over the Red Sox Buddy Rosar capped the scoring spree with a three-run homer.

At Detroit, a couple of other streaks were kept alive as the Tigers swept both ends of a doubleheader with the St. Louis Browns, boosting their own winning spree to five and stretching the Brownies' string of losses to nine.

Jimmy Bloodworth led the Tigers to a 10-5 victory in the curtain raiser with four of his team's 15 hits, while Danny McCosky set the pace for the 7-5 verdict in the afterpiece by driving in four runs.

The Philadelphia Athletics got a pair of nine-inning pitching performances out of Luman Harris and Roger Wolff and walked off with both ends of a twin bill with the Senators at Washington, 6 to 1 and 6 to 3.

* * *

In the National league, the Brooklyn Dodgers tightened their grip on the lead and the Pittsburgh Pirates pushed the New York Giants out of second place with the help of the Boston Braves.

The Dodgers downed the Philadelphia Phils, 3 to 1 and 10 to 2, and hiked their record to 11 wins in 14 starts

The Pirates blanked the St Louis Cardinals, 2 to 0, in the first game at St Louis. The second wound up in a 4-4 deadlock when darkness intervened at the end of the 11th

At New York, the Boston Braves snapped out of an eight-game losing streak and ended the Giants' four-game winning party by capturing a double bill, 3 to 2, and 8 to 5.

The Cincinnati Reds entertained their first Sunday home crowd with a 9-5 decision over the Chicago Cubs

These two teams play again today in the only contest on the major league schedule.

Sees Pins With One Good Eye

Handicapped Kegler Takes Second in ABC.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Uncle Sam had to reject George Kotalik in the draft because one eye was sightless, but the 33-year-old Chicagoan ranks today among the top-flight sharpshooters in the 1942 American Bowling Congress tournament.

His kegling marksmanship yesterday earned him second place in the all-events with 1966—a game average of 218.4—and fourth place in the singles with 736.

If the bowling shipping clerk had not missed a No. 8 pin spare in the second frame of his final singles game he probably would have captured top position in both the all-events and singles.

* * *

He opened the individual event with a 257. He led off in the second game with eight consecutive strikes, then drew the 8-10 split and doubled for a 264. After the final game niiss, Kotalik's strike ball cooled off and he hit 215. In the doubles he scored 623 and in team bowling, with Bennett Arcades, he collected 607.

Tod Moskal of Saginaw, Mich, currently paces the all-events with 1973 and John Stanley of Cleveland heads the singles column with 756.

Measles in childhood cost Kotalik his left eye, but the handicap never has interfered with his bowling.

"That's all I do," he said. "I have no other hobbies, no other interests."

Vandy Holds Reds' Hopes

Series With Cubs Hangs in Balance.

CINCINNATI — (AP) — The improved Cincinnati Reds sent Johnny Vander Meer to the mound in a series-deciding game with the Chicago Cubs on the major leagues' only activity today.

Vandy, loser of a five-hitter against the Cubs and winner of one at Pittsburgh, is slated to oppose Hiram "Hurricane" Bithorn, a big righthander up from Hollywood

The Reds beat the Cubs yesterday 9-5 before 12,858 fans—6,256 less than attended last spring's first Sunday show here. The victory was the third for the Reds in their last four games.

A jostled lineup produced 13 hits for the Reds' best batting performance to date. Frank McCormick homered in the fourth after Gerald Walker's double; and Rookie Catcher Ray Lamanno, starting in place of Rollie Hemsley, socked a double and two singles in a four at-bats and scored three runs Incidentally, Lamanno received a draft reclassification to 1-A.

The Redleg infield that juttered through 16 misplays in its first five games helped faltering Bucky Walters with three sparkling double plays in the first three innings.

Walters was clubbed for nine hits and benched for the second straight time. Gene Thompson earned the victory, holding the Cubs scoreless in the last four innings.

Wolves And Bucks Pacing Big Ten

CHICAGO — (AP) — Unbeaten Michigan and Ohio State and once-defeated Illinois and Iowa pushed themselves well atop the Big Ten standings over the week-end, with only one team—Wisconsin—still untested in league competition.

* * *

The Wolverines and Buckeyes made their league debuts last week-end, Michigan beating Purdue twice, 13 to 1 and 5 to 3, and Ohio State taking a pair from Indiana, 5 to 4 and 6 to 1.

Illinois and Iowa, each with one defeat, won their fourth and fifth league games. The Illini drubbed Chicago, 14 to 2 and 6 to 0. The Hawkeyes grabbed a pair from previously-unbeaten Northwestern 5 to 1 and 12 to 1.

NORFOLK, Va.—(U.P.)—Bullet Bob Feller can still "fog" his fast one past the batters. Rapid Robert bettered his own strikeout record yesterday as he whiffed 21 men when the Norfolk naval nine trimmed Wilson, N. C., of the class C Bi-State league, 8 to 2. Feller's old record was 18 strikeouts while pitching for the Cleveland Indians against Detroit in 1938.

Indians Take Reform Road

'Cry Baby' and 'Quitter' Tags Fit No Longer.

By TOMMY DEVINE

CHICAGO —(UP)— The Cleveland Indians, villains of major league baseball since the revolt in 1940 against Oscar Vitt, are on the road to reform.

The "cry baby" and "quitter" tags acquired during the Vitt regime and carried through Roger Peckinpaugh's managerial reign a year ago, don't fit the current Cleveland team that stretched its winning streak to eight straight here yesterday when it downed the Chicago White Sox and remained tied with the Yankees for first place.

Instead of battling and bickering among themselves, the Indians under their 24-year-old pilot, Lou Boudreau, are directing their fight against American league rivals. The surprising spring surge of the Indians is attributed principally to the hustle Boudreau has instilled in the Tribe. And this professional application of the "old college try" isn't to be merely an early season novelty, Boudreau insists.

"We may not be able to match some of our rivals in mechanical departments of the game," he said, "but no club in the league is going to out-hustle us. We're off to a good start because every man on the club has battled from start to finish of each game. We never give up. It has to be that way all through the season too, because it avails you nothing if you hustle for a little while and then let down."

The Indians, notorious in the past as a club which folded up when the going was tough, have erased some of that stigma by the manner in which it has won the tight games this season. Of the Tribe's 12 games, seven have been decided by the margin of one run and five of those decisions were taken by Cleveland.

While Boudreau realizes the Indians will feel the loss of Pitcher Bob Feller more and more as the season progresses, he isn't wasting time worrying about it. Instead he's attempting to juggle his pitching staff as much as possible to take up the slack.

Boudreau still tells you he'd settle for a first division berth at the wind-up of the campaign, but he wouldn't object to "reforming" that opinion either.

Retains Lead In All-Events

Lois Williams Sets Pace In Tournament.

Lois Williams of Mansfield continues to hold the all-events lead in the Northern Ohio Women's tournament at Tiffin today with her mark of 1801, but her margin at the top of the standings was trimmed to 33 pins over the week-end as E. Ricard of Cleveland posted 1768 in second place.

Hazel Hilborn of Mansfield, in third place a week ago, is now fifth in all-events.

* * *

The Williams-Kellogg team of Mansfield still holds second in doubles, and the Hilborn-Cheney team is third. In the team event, Colony Recreation of Mansfield dropped to a tie for eighth place as the Sozonian Vaults of Bucyrus took the top spot with 2819.

Dramatic Film.

Charles Boyer exercises his continental charm in the Ritz film, "Hold Back the Dawn," in which the French star plays the role of an European adventurer with a talent for fleecing wealthy women of their money. His object in wooing Olivia De Havilland, a romantic school teacher, is entree into the United States previously barried by immigration officials. Paulette Goddard plays Boyer's former dancing partner and the cast has Walter Abel in the role of the immigration inspector. Humphrey Bogart's picture, "All Through the Night," is the co-feature.

CUTS AUTO DEATHS

LOS ANGELES, Cal. —(U.P.)— Tire rationing may prove a blessing in disguise, according to the sheriff's office. During the first month of rationing traffic deaths were 25 less than for the corresponding period last year. Motorists, the sheriff reports, aren't "burning up" their tires now."

Immigration to Canada in 1941 was the lowest it has been since 1860.

Dude Ranches Will Be Hard Hit by the War

SHERIDAN, Wyo. —(INS)— Pity the poor dude. He may soon be "plowed under" as part of the war program.

A shortage of one material may force many ranchers in Wyoming and Montana to cease "production" of dudes and return to such earthly products as cattle and sheep.

And the fly in the ointment is the lowly horseshoe. The steel shortage may cut off the supply, except when the horses are used in vital industry.

Even bona-fide cowboys can't ride horses which have no shoes. Dudes can't even try—if they want to stay healthy.

President I. H. Larom of Valley, Wyo., president of the Wyoming-Montana Dude Rancers Association, pictured this year's business prospects as "problematical."

Chinchillas, originally raised in mountainous regions of South America, are now being bred with success in certain parts of North America.

Dallas Gives a Chill Welcome To Restaurateur

DALLAS, Tex. —(INS)— L. H. Miles is somewhat doubtful about the "Dallas hospitality" he's heard about.

The first day he moved to Dallas from Corpus Christi, to operate a restaurant, thieves broke into his automobile and stole his clothes.

Two days later burglars took $75 worth of merchandise and cash from the restaurant.

A week after that, thieves stole the back seat from his car.

And a week later burglars got $36 more from the restaurant till.

Miles is sleeping with his automobile tires—just in case he decides to drive back to Corpus Christi.

2—Card of Thanks

WITH REGARD TO A CARD OF THANKS

Very often a Card of Thanks in the News-Journal meets a need which can hardly be solved in any other way. Not only is it a gracious expression of gratitude to those who have sent floral tributes, but also courteously acknowledges the service and kindness of the many to whom a personal note of thanks cannot well be mailed, or whose names or addresses are not known.

A "Card of Thanks" can now be arranged by telephone: Dial 4251-6, ask for Miss Lane or Miss Stone, either will be glad to render whatever service and advice you need.

HIGHER ROAD ATTEMPTED BY STOCK MARKET

Sheet and Strip Mills Face Threatened Shutdowns, Magazine Reports.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks generally pointed moderately higher in today's market transactions.

Up fractionally were U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Good Year, U. S. Rubber, Consolidated Edison, Pennsylvania and Phelps Dodge.

Boardrooms scanned the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that, steady increases of orders for heavy metal products, plates, shapes and bars, the question of semi-finished steel supply for lighter materials was becoming more troublesome.

The publication added that "a possiblility is envisioned by some producers by closing down their sheet and strip mills later this year, production of that class of products even now being greatly curtailed from normal proportions."

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—The army moved today to make the entire eastern seaboard a military area to facilitate control of shore lighting, which silhouettes ships to lurking submarines, regulate the movements of enemy aliens and establish widespread supervision of civilian activities.

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson designated Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding general of the eastern defense command and the first army, as commandant of the 16-state military area. Drum said he would organize the area immediately under four corps area commanders.

The organization, which will extend from Maine to Florida and include the District of Columbia, will, in effect, establish a military area similar to that on the Pacific coast, where 112,000 Japanese are being evacuated inland.

Sale Of Sugar Stops Tonight, New Products To Be Rationed

rationed, according to agriculturalists in the national capital.

The War Production board's order on sugar bans all retail sale of that commodity from midnight tonight until after the registration for quota cards begins on May 4. The registration will continue through May 5, 6, and 7, but retail sales will be resumed on May 5 to all persons having books of rationing stamps.

Although May 4 to 7 inclusive are the official dates of the registration, those directing it in Richland county are considering asking for an extension of several days to facilitate the job.

Another sugar registration will start tomorrow at all the high schools of the county. This will be for the 500 retailers, wholesalers, institutions, and industrial users in the county.

To expedite the registration by representatives of firms in this classification, the forms that must be filled out may be obtained in advance of registration at the offices of the Mansfield rationing board which were established today on the 11th floor of the Farmers Bank building. In the past, the board has been meeting in the Chamber of Commerce assembly room.

Meanwhile, as the hour for freezing of sugar sales approached, word came from Columbus that the federal government is taking rationing out of the hands of the state government.

Gov. John W. Bricker revealed that the federal government plans to appoint a sugar rationing director who will receive $8,000 a year for his services. In addition, there will be 15 regional sugar rationing directors in Ohio, appointed by the federal government and receiving $4,600 a year.

Bricker said the federal government also is taking over the job of rationing motor vehicles, tires and tubes which heretofore has been under state control.

The unheralded move left in doubt the future status of the position of Inwood Smith, of Mansfield, a former Ohio State university football star who is in charge of tire and tube rationing.

In order to regulate the flow of traffic during the sugar registration here this week, all applicants whose names begin from "A" through "K" will register tomorrow; those whose names begin with "L" to "Z" on Wednesday. Registration hours are from 2:30 p. m. to 5 p. m., and from 6 to 9 p. m.

In charge of the sugar rationing program in the county is James Bailey, county rationing coordinator, and working with him are W. L. Miller and Boyd Robinson, superintendents of Mansfield and Richland county schools. High school teachers will aid in this weeks registrations, and other teachers in the consumer registrations, which will be at the elementary schools.

With only a week left before housewives and thousands of others begin their trek to the schools to apply for books of stamps, Bailey today warned all persons to be sure to register, whether they need sugar stamps or not. The books may be used for other items to be rationed later.

He cautioned all persons to register their stocks of sugar accurately, as the rationing orders provide maximum penalties of 10 years in prison, a fine of $10,000, or both, for false declarations.

At the time of registration, all households may have on hand a maximum of two pounds of sugar per person without having any stamps deducted from their quota or rationing books by the registrar. No books will be issued to households which have a stock of sugar averaging more than six pounds per person.

The individual quota of sugar for the first eight weeks will be one-half pound per person per week. Each of the first four stamps will be good for one pound for a two-week period.
